In The Secret Chef, celebrities get the chance to don their aprons and prove their culinary worth as they become head chef in a real restaurant for the night. With the task of devising, cooking and serving a delicious menu with a wine list to complement it, the celebrity chefs must prove they have enough skill and flair to impress the fiercest of diners – a table of three food critics.

The identity of the celebrity chef is kept secret from all diners and the critics while they enjoy their meal. As the mystery celeb cooks up a storm, the critics will keep a close eye on the meals placed before them because, with only the food to go on, they must award the chef a star rating. Only once their opinions have been aired with the identity of the celebrity in the chef's hat be revealed.

Whether they are pop stars, politicians, sportspeople or comedians, these famous faces all share a passion for food and will be keen to make the most of this unique opportunity to work in a professional kitchen. The style of cuisine they choose to cook, how they present it, whether they rule the kitchen with an iron fist or with kid gloves – it's all their decision.

So when the final mouthfuls of food have been eaten, the celebrities must stand alone as their identity is revealed to the critics and they learn the truth about their night in charge of the restaurant.

In a world where chefs can become major celebrities, can celebrities cut it in a professional kitchen?
