INTERNATIONAL SUMMIT ON THE
TEACHING18 PROFESSION

Since the first International Summit on the Teaching Profession in 2011 every new Summit has been an opportunity to engage Education ministers and teacher union leaders in debates that will lead to policies designed to improve teacher policies in their countries. And one of the best ways to assess the success of teaching and learning is to give students the chance to apply the knowledge, the competences and the skills they have developed in real workplace settings. That is why the ISTP 2018 organizers decided to assign Portuguese students with key roles as regards the summit's overall organisation and services provided. From the welcoming and reception of delegates at the summit's venue, to the cultural and conviviality moments, through cooking and catering included in the official three days' programme, participants will be assisted, entertained and supported on site by students from several Portuguese vocational education and training schools, under the supervision of their teachers and trainers.

WE THANK VERY MUCH ALL OF THEM FOR THEIR COMMITMENT.

The cluster is currently part of a Priority Intervention Education Territory (TEIP), a programme conceived by the Ministry of Education in order to support schools inserted in pre-identified social problematic areas. Within this framework, the TEIP Programme intends to prevent and to reduce early school leaving and absenteeism rates, and well as to promote the development of strategies to lower indiscipline and to upgrade students' academic results. Nowadays, the cluster is considered a school of reference and/or benchmark as regards supporting blind and low vision students. The Olaias School Cluster's educational project endorses the idea of "Education in Multiculturalism", a leitmotif that intends to serve a population of 278 foreign students, from 33 different nationalities.

ECL is also a mobility certified organization since 2010 and it was awarded with the Erasmus+ Mobility Charter. Moreover, it was the winner of Junior Achievement TES - The Entrepreneurial School Awards 2017, as "The Entrepreneurial School of the Year", an annual European recognition in which fifteen schools across Europe are selected at national level for their entrepreneurial vision and outstanding implementation of entrepreneurship education programmes.

EÇA DE QUEIRÓS SCHOOL CLUSTER

Headteacher Maria José Soares T (+351) 218 540 710

Nowadays, the school cluster is one of the promoting organisations of the Qualifica Network. The school community comprises about 200 teaching staff, more than fifty non-teaching staff, as higher technicians and technical and operational assistants, as well as around 2000 students (among children, youngsters and adults), in an extensive and diverse educational offer, from the pre-school to the secondary school, on a regular or professional basis. The school cluster's educational project is founded in the principles of lifelong education and training, thus supporting the development skills, the promotion of knowledge and qualification, as well as the recognition, validation and certification of skills acquired by adult students either in formal or non-formal contexts. In order to promote school and educational success, we make use of diverse strategies, inside and outside the classroom (e.g. within the scope of curricular, extra-curricular or many curriculum complement activities such as clubs and projects, Erasmus+ partnerships, national and international contests and participations). Numerous protocols and partnerships are established. Being aware of the importance of foreign language learning, the school cluster is deeply committed to the development of English language teaching (the cluster is engaged in a nationwide pilot experience intended to extend the English bilingual teaching for the entire 1st cycle of elementary education). In the constant search for the continuous improvement of school performance, the school cluster invests strongly in quality, efficiency and effectiveness, aiming to achieve excellence in all its schools.

Its population is multicultural and incorporates a large diversity of migrant populations (from Brazil, Cape Verde, Nepal, India, China, etc.) including more than 35 nationalities. Currently, the school cluster is part of a Priority Intervention Education Territory (TEIP), whose definition supposes the design of a special support programme, intended to deal with some of the problems that contribute to the students' lack of academic results, when compared to national standards and rankings (e.g. the risk of social exclusion, difficulties in social integration, absenteeism, and high dropout rates).

12.15 - 13.40 LUNCH Room Vitorino Nemésio

13.45 - 15.15 SESSION 1

Plenary session
Schools at the centre of their communities.

Schools do not operate in a vacuum. Successful schools depend on the resources and support of their communities and schools at the centre of their communities are often the most successful schools. In turn, schools are vital to the social health of their local communities. What can policy-makers with teacher unions and the teaching profession do to strengthen links with communities?

Framing Questions:

1. Given the importance of schools for disadvantaged communities, how can system support for teachers and education staff be strengthened in these schools to drive quality and equity?
2. What can we learn from schools that partner with businesses, educational services and cultural bodies in their community and excel at driving business and social innovation in their communities?
3. How can schools engage the local community and contribute to social responsibility?

15.15 - 15.30 COFFEE BREAK

15.35 - 17.00 SESSION 2

Plenary session
Pedagogies for the future.

At the heart of education is pedagogy. Many teachers have a good sense of the kind of pedagogies on which 21st century learning hinges, but there is a major gap between intended and implemented practices.

Teacher well-being, confidence, efficacy and effectiveness.

The Summit now focuses on teachers themselves. There is a growing recognition that for teaching and learning to be at its most effective, teachers should have high levels of well-being, self-efficacy, and confidence. This mirrors increasing evidence that students' well-being, efficacy, and confidence are vital for their learning.

WELCOME

NEW CHALLENGES AND OPPORTUNITIES FACING THE TEACHING PROFESSION IN PUBLIC EDUCATION

DEAR PARTICIPANT,

We are pleased to welcome you to the 8th International Summit on the Teaching Profession (ISTP) in Lisbon. We are delighted that you have accepted our invitation to discuss and explore the topics related to this year main theme “New challenges and opportunities facing the teaching profession in Public Education”.

Following the previous editions, the 8th ISTP brings together ministers and union leaders from countries and regions with high-performing or rapidly improving school systems, as defined by the results of the most recent Programme for International Student Assessment (PISA).

Thus, ISTP is a unique forum to facilitate and encourage the exchange of experiences and reflect on public education policies.

Over the two days, we will address three interrelated topics:

- i) Schools at the centre of their communities, reflecting on what can policy-makers and the teaching profession do to strengthen links with communities and what are the implications for governance and funding;
- ii) Pedagogies for the future, discussing how can education systems create the conditions for encouraging and supporting teachers to initiate, share, and evaluate innovative pedagogies, including new technologies;
- iii) Teacher well-being, confidence, efficacy and effectiveness in order to debate if and how could governments, in partnership with teacher unions, create evidence-informed strategies on well-being and efficacy as part of their teacher policies.

Attending the pre-summit visits, you will have the opportunity to get to know the Portuguese school system, and visit some schools.

We truly hope that all participants find this summit valuable, solid and constructive.

We look forward to welcoming ministers, union leaders, teaching professionals and education experts to Lisbon!

MUSEU DOS COCHES GOVERNMENT MEMBERS DINNER

On May 23, 1905 the "Royal Coach Museum" was inaugurated in Lisbon by initiative of Queen Amélia of Orleans and Bragança, Princess of France, daughter of the Count of Paris, who married King Carlos I of Portugal in 1886. The location chosen to accommodate the world's first coach museum was in the antique hall of the Royal Riding School modified, specifically to this end, by the Court's architect, Rosendo Carvalheira in collaboration with the painters José Malhoa and Conceição e Silva who, together, were able to achieve an almost perfect harmony between the location and the exhibition of State Vehicles.

FORTE SÃO JULIÃO DA BARRA SUMMIT DINNER

São Julião da Barra Fort is one of Portugal's largest maritime fortifications and is impressive for its size and power. Besides being the official residence of the Portuguese Ministry of Defence, it is the largest Vauban-style military complex in the country. On foggy mornings and afternoons, the line of its walls looks like the bow of a ship ploughing along the Tagus. It was built to protect the sandbar and access to the port of Lisbon. Construction began in the 16th century under King João III and its walls have been witness to some of Portugal's major military confrontations. It's well worth discovering its history protected by the ditches and bastions at the entrance to the city.

The building where the Foundation is located, created by the architect João Simões Antunes, was a factory and a Central of Telex before. Originally, owned by Instituto Superior Técnico (a Portuguese school of engineering), the building was sold in 1944, for the price of 645 000 escudos (the Portuguese currency at the time) to the company H.
